

Bay Sushi opens at Mercato

If you've ever wondered where the ingredients in your favourite sushi roll come from, then Bay Sushi has the answer.

Owner operators Sophie Lee and Simon Jang will source all their ingredients from the local region, making a visit to their new kiosk at Mercato on Byron a truly local culinary experience.

"We're so excited to be opening our new store at Mercato on Byron!" said chef Simon Jang.

"I am passionate about Japanese cuisine and there's no better way to showcase the beautiful produce of the Byron and Northern Rivers region than in fresh, quality sushi varieties – and our new location in Mercato makes it so convenient to pick up a takeaway meal or sit down and eat a delicious, healthy snack while collecting your weekly groceries or coming to see a movie," he said.

Byron Bay locals and visitors are eagerly awaiting the April opening of the new complex which boasts more than 30 specialty stores, a nine-theatre Palace cinema and Woolworths supermarket.

"Mercato on Byron is not your average shopping centre, just as Bay Sushi is more than your typical sushi offering. It's a true fit for us to be opening in this landmark centre, offering the very best in fresh sushi.

"The Bay Sushi experience means all our customers enjoy that wow factor every time they stop for a hand roll, nigiri or bento box. Free range chicken, fresh Pacific kingfish and organic vegetables from the Northern Rivers region go into our menu items – you can taste the freshness," said Mr Jang.

Bay Sushi is located at the entrance of Mercato on Byron and also has a seated area for in dining.
